

WTP8 Workshop

"Ask Me Anything" with WIL Board Member
Milena Harito | 21 September | 16h-17h CEST

"The most important quality is not what you know about your work or sector, is how much you are able to lead people. And to lead people you have to inspire them, energise them."

WIL Board Member Milena Harito, VP IT & Network: Europe from Orange shared her wisdom and unique experience with our Talents in a special 1 hour session moderated by WTP8 Talent Magdel Wessels, Consumer Team Leader at Lenovo. In the first half of the event, Milena covered the lessons she had learnt from a varied career spanning both the public and private sectors before participants had the chance to put their questions to her.

Having been at the forefront of digital transformation throughout her time at Orange, and as a former government minister in Albania, there were no shortage of questions put to Milena on what makes a great leader. Our Talents were also curious to know how Milena balanced her personal life with work throughout her career, how to make language surrounding technical concepts accessible to other colleagues, and what achievements stood out to her in her decades of experience.

She stressed that for people to see you as a leader, empathy, politeness and belief in your team are essential. Milena emphasised that is important to accept views different from your own, but to balance this with independent thought in a world where women are often made to prove themselves and fulfil expectations of others.
